

1. Observation

When before the practice of teaching, I was given time to see the class. There I had the opportunity to analyse classes ranging from student reactions, what material suits, how to teach, and activities they like. I was really thankful, when I observed the class, I met a very professional teacher. I get a lot of lessons to become an interesting teacher for the students. Interesting and variation activities that students love most. In my opinion, classroom observation before teaching is very important and it really helps me to prepare myself for teaching.

2. Practice Teaching

During my first teaching practice at a highly qualified course, LBPP LIA Pengadegan. It was the canter of all branches of the LIA course. I felt proud and had to give my best. Of course all that I could not achieve without advisors from the course or campus. Both advisors provide activity suggestions and a great way to teach children.

In the classroom, I taught all the materials with the exciting and varied activities I got from the advisors, not everything suggested was implemented. But the students were very enthusiastic about learning activities. All of the learning goals of the day were accomplished. After the teaching practice ended, I got advice from the advisors. I was aware of my weaknesses, there were several things I need to improve: how do I give instructions, various questioning techniques, correct student errors, and pronunciations. With the advice given, I was able to improve the way I taught for my final teaching preparation. I was very grateful to have the opportunity to teach in that great course with good and caring advisors about the progress of my teaching.

3. Final Teaching

The time at which the end of the teaching practice arrived. At that time I had to prepare well everything to teach. I asked my college advisors advice on how to teach with activities that varied according to the material. I got good advice then I started to make my teaching plan. When making a plan of learning certainly it cannot be immediately good. I know, I need to improve and fix it because with mistakes can bring success. Finally I taught in the classroom with my teaching plan which has approved by the advisor.

I taught all the materials with activities that increase their understanding of the purpose of the day's learning. When teaching, I provided the best techniques and methods that suit them and the material. I was very happy because students can understand, follow, and achieve learning goals that day. All learning process worked well. Of course, because of my advisors and lecturers who have given lessons on how to become a good teacher but there were still many things I need to improve and learn to become a professional teacher. I have much to learn how to give clear and varied instructions, my lack of clarity when giving instruction is pronunciation.

Without advisors and lecturers who had given me the knowledge, I would not be able to teach in the highly qualified course. I am very proud to be able to teach there and I am very grateful to the campus who has given the teaching practice program for diploma 3 because it is a very valuable and useful experience when I will become a teacher later.
